

Annotation

Presented dissertation focuses on describing and ranking the activities of the preschool age children in nature which are performed without teacher motivation. The main method of research which involved observation of the selected groups of children in the field and evaluation of the record is discussed. Spontaneous activities as an important part of a deliberate program in kindergarten are described.

Keywords

Nature

Preschool child

Basic needs

Spontaneous activity